A full and particular ACCOUNT of the late horrid NEGRO PLOT in Antigua, as Reported by the Committee appointed by the Government there to enquire into the ſame.

ANTIGUA.

To His EXCELLENCY in Council.

IN OBEDIENCE to an Order of your Excellency and Council, made the 9th Day of this Inſtant December, We attend you with a Report of our Proceedings upon the weighty Affair of the late Conſpiracy of our Slaves, intruſted to us by your Excellency, with the Conſent of the Council and Aſſembly: The Subſtance of what appeared to us therein, is,

That the Slaves had formed and reſolved to execute a Plot, whereby all the white Inhabitants of this Iſland were to be murdered, and a new Form of Government to be eſtabliſhed by the Slaves among themſelves, and they intirely to poſſeſs the Iſland. The Slaves chiefly concerned in this Conſpiracy, were thoſe born upon the Gold Coaſt in Africa, whom we ſtile Coromantees, and thoſe born in one or other of the American Sugar Colonies, whom we call Creoles. At the Head of the former, was Court alias Catchy, a Coromantee Negro Man Slave, belonging to Thomas Kerby, Eſq; and at the Head of the latter, was Tomboy, a Creole, born in Antigua, a Maſter Carpenter, belonging to Mr. Thomas Hanſon: The Perſons and Characters of thoſe two Chiefs, were ſo well known to your Excellency and to this Iſland in general, that little need be ſaid of either: However, we ſhall beg ſo much of your time, as juſt to mention that (as we are told) Court was of a conſiderable Family in his own Country; but not as was commonly thought, of Royal Blood; and yet it was fully proved, that he had for many Years, covertly aſſumed among his Country-Men here, the Title of KING, and had been by them addreſſed and treated as ſuch: He appeared to us artful and ambitious, very proud, and of few Words; was brought hither as a Slave, at about ten Years of Age, and was executed when about Forty-five. His Indulgences from his Maſter, were great and uncommon, which gave him the Opportunity of acquiring more Money than it's hardly ever known Slaves are Maſters of; which he perverted in engaging his poorer Country-Men in his evil Deſigns. At the Time of his Execution, he endeavoured to put on a Port and Mien ſuitable to his aſſerted Dignity of King. Tomboy was alſo very kindly uſed by his Maſter; being admitted for his own Advantage, to take Negro-Apprentices, and to make all the Profits he could, of his own and their Labour, paying his Maſter only a monthly Sum, far ſhort of his uſual Earnings; ſo that he too was generally Maſter of Money, and did not fail applying it on all Occaſions, to propagating his vile Purpoſes among the Creoles; and being a Fellow of a robuſt ſtrong Body, and reſolute Temper, he had a great Awe and Influence over them, and had a Genius adapted to caballing.

To theſe two Chiefs were joined other Principals, viz. Hezcules, belonging to Mr. John Chriſtophers; Jack and Scipio, belonging to Mr. Philip Darby; Ned, belonging to Col. Jacob Morgan; Fortune, belonging to Mrs. Johanna Lodge; and Toney, belonging to Col. Samuel Martin; theſe were all Creoles (except Fortune, of whom 'tis doubted, whether he was a Creole or brought hither ſucking at the Breaſt) and had all with their Chief Tomboy, been lately Baptized; and ſeveral of them could read and write. But the moſt active Incendiaries under Tomboy, were Freeman's Secundi, and Sir William Codrington's Jacko, both Creoles of French Parentage, and initiated into Chriſtianity according to the Romiſh Perſuaſion. Of theſe Chiefs and Principals, we can aſſuredly ſay, that they had Hearts and Minds capable of conceiving, Heads fit for contriving, and Hands and Courage for executing the deepeſt and moſt bloody Crimes, even that unparallel'd Hellish Plot formed by them, againſt his Majeſty's Government of this Iſland, and our Lives and Fortunes; and yet they could none of them juſtly complain of the Hardſhips of Slavery; their Lives being as eaſy as thoſe of our white Tradeſmen and Overſeers, and their Manner of Living much more plentiful than that of our common Whites, who were lookt upon by ſome of them for their Poverty and Diſtreſs, with Contempt: Their Employments were handicraft Trades, Overſeeing, or as Houſe-Servants.

To fix certainly the Perſon and preciſely the Time, by whom and when, this Deſign was firſt ſet on foot, is not to be done; It being ſomething, tho' not very doubtful, whether Court or Tomboy firſt moved it; tho' generally imputed to the former; and it is moſt difficult to find out any Period of Time from the Evidence given by Slaves, who are not acquainted with our Manner, nor indeed any certain Manner of computing it: But we have, by all the Evidence, Reaſon to believe, Court was the firſt Author; and have Proof that it was undoubtedly in Agitation, about November, 1735; at which time Martin's Jemmy, by an Artifice of Tomboy's, being made drunk at Trebin's, was brought in to take an Oath or Engagement, as one of the Conſpirators; for Court being ſenſible how impoſſible it was to effect his Deſigns by the Coromantee's only, found himſelf under a Neceſſity of engaging the Creoles, who are the moſt numerous, ſenſible and able Body of our Slaves; and to that end, after a long Coldneſs between him and Tomboy, courted Tomboy's Friendſhip, and obtained it, and found him every way ready for, and equal to his Purpoſe.

The chief Meaſures uſed by the two Heads, to corrupt our Slaves, were Entertainments of Dancing, Gaming and Feaſting, and ſome of them very chargeable ones; always coloured with ſome innocent Pretence, as commemorating ſome deceaſed Friend, by throwing Water on his Grave, or chriſtening a Houſe, or the like, according to the Negro-Cuſtoms:

Cuſtoms: Where they were debauched with Liquor, their Minds imbittered againſt their Maſters, and againſt their Condition of Slavery, by ſtrong Invectives thrown out againſt both; and Freedom with the Poſſeſſion of their Maſter's Eſtates were to be the Rewards of their Perfidy and Treachery; and they never failed to bind their new Proſelites to Fidelity and Secrecy, and to bring all Aſſiſtance in their Power, as they had done each other, by Oaths taken after their Country Cuſtoms, mentioned hereafter more at large. A new Government was to be eſtabliſhed, when the Inhabitants were entirely extirpated; Court was amuſed and flattered by all with being KING of the Iſland; but the Creoles had reſolved unknown to him and his Coromantees, to ſettle a Common-Wealth, and to make Slaves of the Coromantees, and Negroes of all other Nations, and to deſtroy Court and all ſuch who ſhould refuſe to ſubmit to the Terms the Creoles ſhould pleaſe to impoſe upon them.

Towards the Body of the Coromantees, Court had hitherto acted with Reſerve and Caution, but reſolved with one grand Teſt, by which he might at once make Proof of Numbers. This ſeems to be the Maſter-Piece of the Plot, and was to be done in open Day-light, by a Military Dance and Shew, of which the Whites, and even the Slaves (who were not Coromantees nor let into the Secret) might be Spectators, and yet ignorant of the Meaniug; the Languages and Ceremonies uſed at it, being all Coromantee. The Evidences of Witneſſes and Confeſſion of many of the ciminal Coromantees make it appear to us, that it is the Cuſtom in Africa, when a Coromantee King has reſolved upon a War with a neighbouring State, to give publick Notice among his Subjects, that the Ikem Dance will be performed at a certain Time and Place; and there the Prince appears in Royal Habit, under an Umbrello or Canopy of State, preceeded by his Officer called Braffoo, and his Marſhal, attended by his Aſſeng (or Chamberlain) and Guards, and the Muſick of his Country; with his Generals and Chiefs about him. Then he places himſelf upon an advanced Seat, his Generals ſitting behind him upon a Bench; his Guards on each Side, his Braffoo and Marſhal clearing the Circle, and his Aſſeng with an Elephant's Tail keeping the Flies from him, his Muſick playing, and the People forming a Semicircle about him; after ſome Reſpite the Prince riſes, diſtributes Money to the People, them the Drums beating the Ikem-Beat, he with an Ikem i. e. (a Shield, compoſed of Wicker, Skins, and two or three ſmall Pieces of thin Boards) upon his left Arm, and a Lance in his right Hand, begins the Dance, repreſenting the Defenſive Motions of the Shield, thoſe of throwing the Lance, and the ſeveral Geſtures by them uſed in Battle. When the Prince begins to be fatigued, the Guard run in and ſupport him; he delivers the Ikem and Lance to the Perſon who next dances; then is led ſupported to his Chair, and is ſeated again in State, and whenever he riſes he is in like manner ſupported: Then the ſame Dance is performed by ſeveral others, but without the Ceremony of being ſupported. Then the Prince ſtepping into the Area of the Semicircle, with his chief General, and taking a Cutlaſs in his Hand, moves with a whirling Motion of his Body round about, but dancing and leaping up at the ſame time, from one Horn or Point of the Semicircle, quite to the other, ſo as diſtinctly to be viewed by all; and then returning to the Center of the Semicircle with his General, makes ſeveral Flouriſhes with the Cutlaſs, gently touching with it the General's Forehead, and having at the ſame time, the Ikems (the Number of which is uncertain) held between his own and the others Body, he takes an Oath highly reverenced by the Coromantees, which is to the following Purpoſe, he ſwears to the General, that where he falls, he'll drop by his Side, rather than forſake or deſert him in Battle; and that he will behave as a Brave Prince ought: But in Caſe he ſhould fail in performing his Oath, he agrees with and deſires his Subjects preſent, to take off his Head; and makes a Grant of his Houſes, Lands and all his Subſtance. This Oath (tho' in the firſt ceremonial Part directed to the General only) is nevertheleſs underſtood to be made to the People as well as him. If he is anſwered by three Huzzas from thoſe preſent, by the Cuſtom of their Country, it ſignifies not only a Declaration of their believing that he will obſerve his Oath; but it is an actual and ſolemn Engagement on their Side to do as he doth, and to join and go with him to the War. For the Breach whereof they are regarded as Traitors. Braffoo ſtanding behind Court with a wooden Cutlaſs, cryed Tackey, Tackey, Tackey, Coquo; King, King, King, Great King; which Words are uſed in the Coromantee Country every Morning at the King's Door by Braffoo; and thereupon a Captain taken in the Courſe of War is cut to Pieces by Braffoo: Then the Ceremony of this Dance is concluded by Braffoo's cutting to pieces in the Semicircle a Captive taken by Surprize from the People the War is intended againſt. Braffoo thro' the whole Ceremony, having his Face whitened over, to prevent it being known, and dreſt with a Cap full of Feathers, and a Bundle at his Back repreſenting a dead Negro Child as the Badge of his Office.

This Shew and Dance the uſurping Traitor, Court, exhibited on Thurſday, the 5d of October laſt, at about two of the Clock in the Afternoon, in Mrs. Lumbar Parke's Paſture near the Town, in the preſence of ſome Whites, whoſe Curiouſity led them thither, and of a very great number of Coromantee and Creole Slaves; and he took the Oath, and obſerved all the Ceremonies of it; only that there was no Umbrella, which Emanuel, a faithful Slave of Mr. Gregory's, gueſſing at Court's Deſign, had refuſed to make; but the Place of that was ſupply'd by two Ikems; and the Cutlaſſes and Launces were intirely of Wood, and a Drum was cut to pieces inſtead of a Man, figuring by this laſt how they would ſerve the Whites when overcome. Court had a good Sabre by his own ſide, with a red Scabboard, and appeared as a King, having on a particular Cap, proper to the Kings of his Country. This Cap was made of Green Silk Imbroidred with Gold, with a deep Border either of black Fur or black Feathers, and three Plumes of Feathers in it: He had often worn it before, but without the Feathers. Hawe's Gift was his Braffoo, Gregory's Autmon his Marſhal, and Gregory's Quaſhee was his Aſſeng; and Tomhon, Hercules, Fortune, and Darby's Jack, were his Generals, who at their coming (Court being before there and expecting them) were introduced with much State and Ceremony, and ſeated properly behind Court; but Tomhon was the greateſt General, to whom the Ceremony of the Oath in the Coromantee Language, was perform'd by Court: The byſtanding Slaves Huzza'd three times; the Coromantees knowing, but the Creoles not underſtanding the Engagement they entered into by it. For to ſome who knew it, the thing appeared ſo audacious and terrible, that ſome of the Coromantees endeavoured by means of Jumping among the Dancers and Spectators, and otherwiſe, to prevent it's being perform'd; apprehending the Meaning of it might be diſcovered, and being ſenſible nothing could be intended by it, leſs than a Declaration of War, and of Neceſſity againſt the Whites. This Dance without the Oath is often uſed in the Coromantee Country, as an Entertainment; and upon other innocent Occaſions; but when attended with the Oath; is ſo certain a Declaration of War, that the Neighbouring Princes ſend to know againſt whom the War is intended, and according to the Anſwer return'd, prepare or not for their Defence. This Cuſtom is ſo ſacred among the Coromantees, that 'tis Death for a Subject not licenſed by the Prince to uſe it with the Ceremony of the Oath. The nature of this part of the Plot being very uncommon, we have been the more particular in it.

The Method firſt propoſed for executing the Plot, was, that Tomhon ſhould procure the making of the Seats at a Great Ball, at which they knew all the People of Note, in the Iſland, would be preſent by your Excellency's Invitation, and which was intended to be had the 11th of October laſt, being the Anniverſary of His preſent Majeſty's Coronation; and he was to contrive the laying a quantity of Gun-Powder in the Houſe; and when the Company was Dancing, Fire was to be ſet to three Trains, upon the Notice of firing a Gun and beating a Drum, which were a Notice alſo to the Negroe Muſicians and Attendants (who were to be let into the ſecret) firſt to depart: When the Blaſt was over, and all in the utmoſt Confuſion, three at leaſt if not four Parties, intended to conſiſt of 3 or 400 Men each, were to enter the Town at different Parts, and to put all the White People there to the Sword; ſeven ſtrong Guards to be placed in the out Parts of the Town, to prevent Relief; St. John's Fort to be ſeized with all the Shipping in the Harbour; and Signals to be given to thoſe in the Country, to begin there the ſame tragical Scene, and proceed onwards to the Town, deſtroying all in their way. Monks-hill, our chief Fort and Arſenal, was to be ſeized, and the Arms diſtributed; the

Guards

Guards there deſtroyed, and all the Avenues ſecured by ſtrong Guards of Slaves. But the Ball upon Notices ſent by your Excellency's Order before the 11th of October, was put off to the 30th, being his Majeſty's Birth-Day. This occaſioned a Meeting and a warm Debate among the principal Conſpirators, whether or no they ſhould execute their Plot, by immediately falling on with Fire and Sword, or wait for the Ball. All (except Court) were for immediate Execution, but his Opinion happily prevailed; and it was deferred 'till the intended Ball; before which the Goodneſs of GOD wrought our Deliverance from this Execrable Maſſacre. The Suſpicions of a Plot were firſt owing to the uncommon Liberty of Behaviour and Speech of ſome Slaves in and about the Town, an unuſual Noiſe of Conck-Shells blown in the Dead of Night without any apparent Cauſe; the Aſſembling of great Numbers of Slaves at unſeaſonable Times; great Feaſtings and Caballings at one of which Court was then reported to have been Crowned and Honoured as KING; Liſts of Officers and Soldiers, and Proviſion of Ammunition ſpoke of and enquired after among them; which with other Circumſtances, being examined into by a Magiſtrate of the Town, and by his Means laid before your Excellency in Council; your Excellency with Advice of Council Ordered an Enquiry into it; which was followed by a Diſcovery much owing to the free Confeſſions of the before mentioned Slave Emanuel, and Robin a Coromantee Slave of Col. John Gunthor's, and of Cuffee a Cormantee Slave of Walter Nugents; but to the laſt the Diſcovery of Blowing-up was entirely owing, being a Secret, that Court and Comboy had made known to few, if any, of the Conſpirators, and diſcovered by Cuffee's over-hearing a private Converſation held between thoſe two in a dark Night, at Mr. Kerby's Back-door. The Diſcovery was wonderfull, but not more ſo than we think the Concealment for ſo long a Time, of a Plot, wherein it afterwards appeared ſuch Numbers were concerned: The latter we remark as an extraordinary Proof of the Fidelity of Slaves to each other, and of the contrary to their Maſters.

Upon the Evidence of theſe Facts, the firſt twelve of the Conſpirators mentioned in the annext Liſt, were executed; and this Satisfaction was had by the imperfect Confeſſions of Court and Tomboy, that the whole Evidence againſt themſelves, was confirmed, and the Plot put paſt the poſſibility of being doubted; tho' neither of theſe confeſſed till after Condemnation; the former making no Confeſſion but at the Place of Execution, after having been tryed about half an Hour upon the Wheel, and then untied at his own Requeſt, in Order to confeſs; but the latter freely confeſſed before he came to the place of Execution, and without any Pain inflicted.

Now we thought the Work was concluded, the Witneſſes being able to give us no further Light: Court and Tomboy had aſſured us the Plot was ſtifled in its Birth, and before the Poiſon had been far ſpread; the Truth of which tho' we doubted, we were not able to diſprove; and for want of Evidence were put to a full Stop; but tho' we were far from penetrating into their ſecret Villanies, GOD's all-ſeeing Eye look't thro' them; and his merciſull Providence laid them open to our View; and by voluntary Information of Philida, a Siſter of Tomboy's, who was taken up upon Suſpicion of ſome violent Expreſſions uſed upon her Brother's Account; by her Examination ſhe diſcovered, and her Brother Jemmy after his being taken into Cuſtody, confirm'd, that frequent Saturday-Night Meetings of great Numbers of Conſpirators, had been for a great while held at the Houſe of Treblin a Slave of Mr. Samuel Morgan's, who was thereupon ſecured, and threw himſelf into our Hands, without Hope of Mercy, making an ample Diſcovery, and was the firſt that informed us of their Oath, and gave an Account of it's being taken by many over a Grave at the Point, and at his own Houſe. By theſe Lights we ſaw, that much remained to be done, and that our Danger was as great as ever: This ſpurred us on to a vigorous Purſuit of our Enquiry; in which by the Evidence of Treblin, Philida and Jemmy her Brother, and others afterward admitted as Evidences, viz. Langford's Billy, Col. Martin's Jemmy, Lynch's Tom, Mr. Stephen's Dick, Major Martin's Quamino, and Col. Fry's Quamino, there were convicted and condemned by us, and accordingly executed, Thirty-five Slaves more; and Forty-two other Slaves, againſt whom the Evidence was not ſo full, we humbly recommend to the Conſideration of the Legiſlature for Baniſhment, unleſs upon further Diſcoveries the Juſtices ſucceeding us in this Inquiry, ſhould judge them deſerving Death; we not believing it conſiſtent with the Country's Safety, as Matters appeared to us, to keep them here; nor being convinced that we ought to have condemned them to Death upon the Evidence given againſt them; which with the Subſtance of all the other Evidence, we are ready to lay before your Excellency, and without which it cannot be known upon what Difference in Point of Evidence, we condemned ſome and forbore to condemn others to Death.

We conceive our Narrative would be imperfect, without giving ſome Account of this new Scene opened by the Evidence of Treblin and other Witneſſes, ſince the Execution of the firſt 12 Conſpirators; which was in Subſtance, that the Oath of Secreſy and Fidelity had been taken, both by Court and Tomboy, and almoſt by every one of the firſt 12, and by every one that was ſince condemned, executed, or ſtand recommended for Baniſhment. The Manner of Adminiſtring the Oath, was by drinking a Health in Liquor, either Rum or ſome other, with Grave-dirt, and ſometimes Cock's Blood infuſed; and ſometimes the Perſon ſwearing, laid his Hand on a live Cock; the Words were various, but the Tenor was, To ſtand by and be true to each other, and to kill the Whites, Man, Woman, and Child; to aſſiſt in the Execution of this, when called upon by the Chief; and to ſuffer Death rather than diſcover; with Damnation and Confuſion to thoſe who ſhould refuſe, or having drank and ſworn, ſhould afterwards diſcover. Sometimes too the Perſon ſwearing, chewed Malagetta Pepper. This Oath was adminiſtred to great Numbers before the Execution of Court and Tomboy, and to many ſince; and had been adminiſtred at no leſs than ſeven Places that appeared to us, viz. at the Grave near the Point, at Treblin's Houſe, at Secundi's Houſe, at the Houſe of John Sabby, at his Maſter Mr. Pace's Plantation, at a great Feaſt at Mr. French's Eſtate, at the Houſe of Langford's Billy, and at Targate's Houſe, at Mr. Lindſey's, at which Places, particularly at Secundi's, great Numbers yet to us undiſcovered, took this Oath; and that nothing might be wanting for their Encouragement, Secundi had called to his Aſſiſtance, a Negro Obia-Man or Wizzard, who acted his Part before a great Number of Slaves, aſſembled at Secundi's to take the Oath, and aſſured them of Succeſs.

Upon the Execution of the firſt twelve, it might have been reaſonably thought, that at leaſt a preſent Stop might have been put to their proſecuting this Bloody Conſpiracy; but the Conſpirators Spirits ſeem'd rather to be raiſed than ſunk by it; for at a little Supper as they call it, that is, of not above four or five Diſhes, at Langford's Billy's, on Tueſday the 26th of October laſt, which was within a Week of Court's and Tomboy's Executions, many of the Conſpirators, and among them, ſome who for Want of Evidence were enlarged but the Saturday before, with Secundi, that grand Incendiary, at their Head, to the Number of Fifty at leaſt, took the Oath; and Secundi and Jacko were for a ſpeedy Execution; but yet they thought proper to appoint an other Meeting at Sir William Codrington's Jacko's, where they were to reſolve upon ſpeedy Meaſures of executing their horrid Paricide; but this was happily prevented by the taking up of Treblin, and ſoon after him Langford's Billy and many other Principals.

Walpole's Servants and Baggage were; and that they did not know what was become of the Yatcht his Majesty was in; that they had enquir'd at Harwich, and found that His Majesty was not arriv'd there; nor had they any Account of his Arrival any where: Which occasions a great Consternation; But it's hop'd He is put back to Holland, or sail'd to the Northward.

Williamsburg, Feb. 18. We hear from the Upper Parts of James River, that the Ice has damag'd several Vessels; and that by the Severity of the late Weather, large Flocks of Wild-Fowl, were starv'd and froze to Death; and since the Ice has been gone, great Numbers of Fish have been thrown upon the shore dead; the like has not been known in the Memory of Man.

Last Night arriv'd at York, the Ship Gooch, Capt. William Harding, from London: He has had as short a Passage as has been known for many Years, having left Gravesend the 14th, and Start Point the 22d of January. The Capt. says, he saw one of the King's Yatchts, attended by a Man of War, sail towards Harwich; that the same Evening, he heard a great Number of Guns, and believed they were fir'd on Occasion of his Majesty's Landing there. The Capt. saw Two Ships go into James River; one of which proves to be the Mary, Capt. Stephen Read, from London; the other, bound for Liverpool, but put back by contrary Winds.

PHILADELPHIA, Marcs 17

On Wednesday and Thursday last, We had here a violent Storm at South East, which rais'd the Tide higher than has been known for many Years, and damag'd the Wharffs considerably. We hear that it has likewise done great Damage both up and down the River, by breaking the Banks of Meadows, and the like.
